

Isana was a small German guitar manufacturer who made their instruments by hand and with extreme precision. Founder and master luthier Franz Sander built most of his early Isana guitars with his own hands. Isana was known worldwide for the precise work and the high level of craftsmanship that went into the guitars. The luthier was made famous by the rise of Elvis Presley, who famously played an Isana.